

Sobre els centres de recerca a Barcelona i de com la capital de Catalunya esta esdevinguent un pol d'atraccio cientifica, a EL PAIS

October 27, 2004

The newspaper EL PAIS has published a feature article about Barcelona as an appealing city for scientists due to the emergence of several small but extremely active research establishments which are captivating not only scientists from Spain but also from many other places in the world. The journalist offers an overview about the most important research centers set up in the capital of Catalonia.

